CHEIP LIVING.-We cannot altogether boast, says the Pall Mall Gazette, that we are better of than our fathers. In a "Book are better off than our fathers. In a "Book of the Joint Diet, Dinner, and Supper, and the charge thereof, for Cranmer, Latimer, and Ridley," kept by the ballifs of Oxford, while the said right reverend prelates were in the custody of those officers, we find in the bill for "dinner," October 1, 1551, a charge of 1d. for oysters. Allowing—and the supposition is not wholly improbable—that my lords of London, Canterbury, and that my lords of London, Canterbury, and Worcester each ate a dozen, oysters must have been cheap indeed, even after every allowance has been made for the depreciasion of the precious metals in three hundred years. The remaining items of the scopal banquet consisted of "bread and ale." 2d.; butter, 2d.; eggs, 2d.; lyng, 8d.; a piece of fresh salmon, 10d.; wine, 3d.; "cheese and pears," 2d.—total, 2s. 6d. This was not bad for a Friday dinner in prison. Some years before Parliament had fixed the price of beef and pork at id. the pound and the price of yeal at id., while, if their lordhe half-penny. But the golden age of good living must have been the reign of King Edward L., when a common council of London deemed it necessary to fix the price of various articles of diet as follows: Two pullets, 1id.; a partridge or two wood-cocks, 1id., a fat lamb, 6d. from Christmas so Shrovetide; the rest of the year, 4d.

HER VIEW OF IT .- "Suppose, Belle," said rie-Avenue girl one day this week, "suppose that a young man loved you dearly, would you think of such a case?"

"Think?" answered the girl immediately. "Why, if he was poor, I should hand upon a man who would be perfectly think that he was doing just right in keeping still about it!" The question was dropped right there.

ONE EFFECT OF CHEAPER COAL .- The other day as a pale-faced, hollow-eyed man was walking along Woodward avenue, using his cane to support his feeble steps, a pedestrian halted him, reached out a hand,

"Why, Tom, is this you?" "Yes, it's me," was the mournful reply. "And what's the matter?"

"I'm all run down, and I've lost my "Lost it? How? Been discharged?" "Yes," sadly replied the poor man. "I'm looking for a job now."

"I know a coal-dealer who wants a driver," suggested the friend. "No good-no good," with a mournful shake of the head. "I've been to two or three, and as soon as they found that my weight was down to 120 pounds they turned
